

Subway transit plan receives Ottawa council's OK

December 7, 2006

According to a report in the Ottawa Citizen a compromise plan that charts Ottawa's mass transit future -- including a possible downtown subway -- narrowly passed at city council yesterday, without councillors knowing how much it's going to cost.

By a vote of 12 to 11, councillors approved what is now an $810-million LeBreton Flats-to-Barrhaven electric light-rail line, and looked at building a tunnel across downtown to east of the University of Ottawa, which is estimated to cost $500 million.

Please click the following link for more information:

**Ottawa Citizen Article**